Hello, Sunshine

Laura Dave

---

1. It only took a few clicks for Sunshine's life to get smeared on the internet. However, her claim to fame was built on a story she invented. Did she deserve it? Why not just tell the truth?
2. Birthdays tend to be days of celebration. On this particular birthday, Sunshine gets hacked. By the end of the book, does she have anything to celebrate?
3. Having to move back to her childhood home and face the dysfunctional relationship she has with her sister, does Sunshine redeem herself? Is she a reformed person? Why or why not?
4. Who did Sunshine owe the biggest apology to? Danny, her husband? Her sister? The fans? Herself?
5. How do you feel about Danny being revealed as the hacker? Could he have taught her a lesson about losing herself in a different way?
6. What is there to say about real life versus online personas? Is it okay to sell a story to the public, but live a different life behind closed doors?
7. Sunshine's marriage is ruined and her affair comes to light, yet this isn't a book about love. How does the lack of a romantic plot help or hinder this story?
8. What would your advice be to Sunshine as she rebuilds her life after the scandal?
9. What do you think about the author's writing style? Would you consider this more a beach read (typically contemporary romance) or a dramedy (comedy with dramatic moments)?
10. What are the biggest themes in this book and which one resonates most with you?
